He had no appreciation of the "mischief" in his motives, or the hazards of his undertaking. Mrs. Brisbane was somewhat concerned about his dilemma, and begged him not to go. "If one cannot escape an unpleasant situation," Mrs. Brisbane said, "it is better to meet it. The point of view which you have adopted is better than a defeat. It is a defeat if human ingenuity fails, and you do not know whether that has happened or not. In my opinion, you have the best of the question, so you had better stay. But I shall certainly go if I can go without offending anyone. Now, do as you like." "The question," said Mrs. Brisbane, after she and her friend had left the house, "is not whether you should go, but whether it is a duty. Is it a duty for you to go to Hawaii to teach a person whom you do not like, and who probably does not wish to teach you?" "Yes, ma'am, I think it is." "Does not your conscience object to the employment? Do you have enough money to go?" "Yes, ma'am, I am not dependent upon my salary." "Then, I am satisfied that it is a duty." "It seems to me a duty," I said, "and I shall go." "And I," said Mrs. Brisbane, "am satisfied that it is a duty for you to go, and I shall accompany you." I was puzzled and surprised. Mrs
